

Richard McIntosh, Managing Director, ADR People

Richard McIntosh has 18 years experience in procurement, as a practitioner in industry, as an interim manager and as a consultant.

He has worked in procurement roles for several large organisations including Ford New Holland, KPMG Consulting, B&Q, Nokia, Visa and eircom.

Richard's expertise in strategic sourcing and his work with a wide range of world-class international procurement organisations has led to a focus on the building and motivation of high performance procurement teams.

He now leads ADR People, the specialist recruitment and interim management business of global procurement consultants ADR International.

Richard is happy to speak with authority on any issue connected with recruitment and labour market issues, with particular reference to purchasing, procurement and supply chain management, at local or global level.

ADR International is one of the longest-standing global procurement consultancies, established in 1986. It now offers a full range of procurement services covering consultancy, training and development, interim and permanent recruitment, sourcing, technology and audit.

www.adr-international.com